Check out our Band Score Details & Tips for Improvement page to learn more about what's required to achieve different band scores. Data visualization tools include lines, tables, pie charts, diagrams, and maps. Lines illustrate changes in numbers over time or across categories. Tables show complex data divided into rows and columns, often comparing or contrasting different groups. Pie charts display the proportion of a whole divided among various categories, sometimes highlighting change over time. Diagrams demonstrate processes, cycles, or stages, providing a step-by-step explanation of how something works or is made. Maps describe layouts, positions, and features, potentially showing comparisons between different time periods. Practice resources are available for IELTS Writing Task 1, including sample charts, line graphs, bar charts, maps, and diagrams, as well as model answers with estimated band scores of 9. Reviewing these materials can help improve report writing skills and understanding of the task's requirements. GT letters have different objectives, styles, and tones, such as formal or informal. Check the essential tips below for information. The writing task of 33% in total has four marking criteria each worth 25%, including Task Achievement, Coherence & Cohesion, Vocabulary, and Grammar. Task Achievement refers to completing the letter and achieving its objectives. Coherence & Cohesion deals with the structure, organization, and linking methods used in the letter. You can practice at home using a collection of practice letters that showcase different formal, informal, and purposes of letters.
